

Rankings Week 1

1. Stefan

Solid team. Kirk should be consistent. Le'Veon is rock solid. Melvin is consistent. Alshon and Crabtree can get the job done. Some intriguing bench players. Probably a top 4 team.

2. Chandler

Solid team my dude. I think Newton will bounce back to his former glory. Murray should be solid once again. I'm not so confident in the Jags to get Fournette carries, but he certainly has the talent. Demaryius should be solid. Maclin is an unknown, but Parker isn't a bad option if Maclin doesn't pan out. Witten should be consistent. Ingram is a bit worrying, but he still finished as the number 9 back year so we'll see.

3. Brendan

Wilson will get injured. He'll take too many hits. Gurley will continue to be held back by the Rams. David Johnson is David Johnson. Dez is a cunt. Robinson is shit. Kelce is good. West is mediocre. Bench has some potential. Should be a top 5 squad easy due to David Johnson.

4. Horlacher

Maybe you'll finally do something this year. If Ben stays healthy he should be a solid option. Coleman is a solid back, but is limited by Freeman. Blount is a massive unknown. Brown and Cooks should be top tier. Some solid bench depth as well. I'm sure we'll trade at some point this year.

5. Peter

Surprisingly brought in a solid draft this year. Ryan was a fantastic keeper. I think Ajayi will regress, but is still a solid option. Hyde is underrated imo. I think Hopkins will have a bounce back year. Adams should be consistent. If one of your bench players turns into a consistent flex, then this team could go pretty far.

6. Richard

Solid team top to bottom. Current weak links are quarterback and the flex spot. QB should sort itself out when Luck comes back, and Rawls or a waiver pickup could fill in that flex spot. If both of those likely events happen then this team is a strong contender.

7. Erik

We got a risky team this year boys. Only sure bets on this team are Beckham and Elliott, however the rest of the team has MASSIVE potential, so better watch out. We're done playing it safe and I'm feeling good about this team. I'll play the waiver and we'll wreck shit.

8. Ozzie

Pretty weak at wide receiver, however there is a lot of unknown there as well. I think Tyreek will be game planned for much better this year. Cobb was pretty bad last year, but maybe he'll turn it around. I think Marshall should have a solid year, but will be limited by all of the options in the Giants offense. Outside of that, however, you have a solid team. Running backs aren't top tier, but should be consistent with potential for big games. Dak should still be a reliable option. If you can find some consistency at receiver then you have a good shot.

9. Tommy

Your running back situation is atrocious, but you already know that. Better hope for Brady and Julio to carry you, because Hilton will be limited with Luck out. This team needs some luck with AP having a comeback or a waiver wire pickup. Not a terrible spot, but glaring holes can't be ignored.

10. Trey

Disappointing draft in my opinion but what do I know? Mixon and Wentz are gambles. Woodhead is consistent but no big games. Cooper and Nelson are solid. Gronk struggles to stay healthy. After that there's a bunch of bench hopefuls. This team is relying on some unknowns doing well but at this point I can't assume that that will happen.

11. Geoffrey

Here's the preview you fucking bitch. Perkins is trash. Brees is old. Green will be injured the whole year. Tate is decent. Freeman is good but Coleman keeps him from elite status. Martellus should be solid. Bench is pretty boring. Fuck you.

12. Charlie

Carr is solid, but I believe he will regress. Crowell will be kinda good but not great. Good luck with Powell on that dumpster fire team. Baldwin is solid. Wallace is consistently mediocre with a few flashes of greatness. Olsen is solid. Tyrell is decent. Bench doesn't leave much to excitement. I expect you to not suck.

13. Andrew

I expect yet another year of not being terrible, but not being a threat. Shady is a solid running back but the Bills are looking like trash. Ty Mont has too much competition. Dalton is very average. Allen never stays healthy. Shepard is arguably the 4th target in the Giants offense. Cook is bad. Kelley is a wildcard, however and could bring you to the promised land.

14. Carman

A lot of risk and unknown on this team. Rodgers is about the only thing I would count on at this point. Lynch is a gamble. McFadden is a band-aid. Fitz slowed way down at the end of last year. Pryor is on a new team, but should be solid. Henry is pretty mediocre. New England running back situation changed quite a bit, so White's role is cloudy. With all that said, this team is in no way out of it and after a few weeks a lot of the above questions will be answered and a more accurate assessment can be made.

Week 1 Matchup Predictions:

Erik over Charlie

Stefan over Tommy

Chandler over Horlacher

Peter over Geoffrey

Brendan over Richard

Carman over McDowell

Trey over Ozzie